

Glucose and Triglycerides are storage forms.

Triglycerides are long-term, glycogen is short-term

Their building blocks are interchangeable.

Cells need ATP to make proteins and do other metabolism. All cells can use glucose directly to make ATP. Some, such as muscles, can also burn fatty acids directly.